The Story

Tonight's show intends to demonstrate the similarities between the seasons of the year and the stages in a relationship.

The season of summer is meant to convey the blissful, beginning state of a relationship.

Fall represents the stage of a relationship when each member exposes their own personal flaws or makes mistakes that makes the other doubt the integrity of the relationship.

The relationship comes to an end as winter approaches. The bleak, hopeless period of time that most experience after a break-up is similar to the weather conditions that are present in this season.

However, all hope is not lost. After a long period of patient waiting, spring emerges and love is found again.

Please join us afterwards for refreshments.
